RE: TOURISM FLEXIBILITY

For the purpose of COVID-19 management, currently, tourists are defined as persons who come to the country to stay at certified accommodations, regardless of the period of stay.

Whereas other visitors and returning nationals are required to sign a quarantine form, thereby committing to remain on the property indicated, the Health Authorities agree on a certain controlled flexibility when it comes to tourists.

The consideration is that tourists usually come for a very limited number of days, during which they wish to enjoy the advertised offerings of the destination, even with some understandable limitations, given the COVID-19 reality.

With that in mind, apart from certifying hotels and other accommodations, the Health and Tourism Authorities have certified a number of leisure activities, to ensure that visitors experience them in a safe manner.

Every certified establishment or individual offering accommodation, services and/or activities, must be in possession of a valid certificate, indicating COVID-19 protocol training. They are expected at all times to demonstrate that they are enforcing the relevant protocols, and will be monitored for that reason.

Certified activities include: destination weddings, dining out, land and sea excursions and certain other outdoor activities.

Compliance with the nationally established COVID-19 protocols is a legal requirement, and is therefore expected of all visitors.
